

An interpretation of history is an historical account written some time after the event and looking back on it.

Historical interpretations always combine fact, fiction, imagination and a point of view.