First World War Teaching Resources from the British Army, in partnership with the National Army Museum

The British Army have created a number of teaching resources for those studying the First World War. These cover a very wide range of topic areas and provide teachers and students with a range of images and other sources such as diary extracts within each theme. There is also a further sections about the major military campaigns of the war.

http://www.army.mod.uk/firstworldwarresources/

The National Army Museum have also created a separate microsite onto which they are regularly uploading new resources. These included a range of individual stories which told through a range of sources and also some very interesting resources on the role of Empire troops in the First World War and the war beyond the Western Front.

http://www.nam.ac.uk/microsites/ww1/

A further element of the Army’s commemorations of the centenary of the First World War, is ‘Soldiers to Schools’. This provides secondary schools with the opportunity to request a soldier to visit their school to support teaching activities within the classroom. To find out more about this scheme visit the following site http://www.army.mod.uk/training_education/25813.aspx